Next, I could not have completed the research without the efforts of two research assistants, Sonja Rizzolo and Richard Dougherty. Both Sonja and Richard worked on the research team from the beginning, helping to identify randomly-selected respondents, coding and entering the data, and generally being available when their assistance was needed. I also want to thank Dr. Susan Collins, Dr. Faye Hummel, and April Hummel who assisted me in the survey process. Also aiding us in the comprehensive assessment process were RSVP volunteers. They folded, stuffed, labeled, and stamped hundreds of questionnaires for mailing. We couldn't have done this project without them!

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, I want to thank the individuals in all aspects of data collection who graciously consented to participate in the study by returning the completed mail survey and participating in focus groups. Without their input and responses, this project could not have been completed. All of these individuals contributed to the collection of invaluable data that will assist community leaders in developing programs and resources to help address the needs of Weld County residents.
